> Proof you will pay the Annual Market Salary Rate (AMSR)

 Required  Original

If the employee will earn less than AUD250,000 a year, see how to prove you will pay them the annual market salary rate (AMSR) for their occupation. Clearly identify and explain your evidence. If you provide unlabelled salary surveys or vague details on how you determined the AMSR, Department of Home Affairs might refuse your nomination. Where there is a difference between the determined AMSR and the nominee's proposed salary, explain why.

> Proof that the position is genuine

 Required  Original

Show that the nominated position exists and that it is what you say it will be. This could include evidence that: the nominee will spend most of their time on tasks of the nominated occupation the business needs those skills to operate Documents you could provide include: a duty statement of the responsibilities of the nominated position (duties should not just be copied from ANZSCO, although they should substantially align with the tasks listed in ANZSCO) a structure chart showing how the position fits into the business and the full names of current employees and details of any visas held a brief description of the nature of the business and how the nominated position fits within it proof that the position existed before you lodged the nomination or if the position is new, any related plans for expansion that may have created the new position information about who used to perform the tasks of the position evidence that the position has gone through a transparent recruitment process including the number of candidates interviewed and why they were not suitable

> If a caveat applies

 Recommend  Original

Caveats apply to some occupations for the subclass 186 visa. These caveats exclude the occupation from eligibility under the employer nomination scheme in some circumstances. Where Department of Home Affairs might assess the occupation you are nominating as ineligible due to a caveat, provide evidence that it is eligible. For example, one caveat applied to the occupation of chef is that the nominated position can't be in a fast food or takeaway food service. Provide evidence to show the caveat does not apply to the position so that Department of Home Affairs don't assess it as ineligible, such as: a detailed position description an explanatory statement and evidence that describes the core activities of your business a copy of the menu a link to your website a floor plan photographs of the premises that show the size and type of your establishment details of food preparation done on the premises details of table service provided and the volume of in-restaurant dining any other evidence you consider relevant You can also ask us to consider the broader circumstances when Department of Home Affairs assess caveats - for example, the turnover and salary caveats, including those of an overseas parent company. Submit your request to us in writing. Department of Home Affairs list any caveats that apply to occupations on the skilled occupations list .
